It was a great opportunity for our B.Sc. students to visit and participate in the Open Day Program organized by IASST on 09/03/2019. As per their invitation, the Principal Barbhag College entrusted Department of Chemistry to make necessary arrangement for the program. Accordingly, 23 nos of students were selected mainly from Chemistry (Honours), Chemistry (Regular), Mathematics (Honours) along with three Guide Teachers of Barbhag College.

The Open Day Program is a part of Outreach Program of IASST which provides the opportunity to school and college students to visit the research laboratories and interact with the researchers of the Institute. During the visit students were explained the functioning of sophisticated instruments such as SEM, GC-MS, Confocal Microscope etc. and also explained the different aspects of research done by Institution Scientists with practical demonstration.

The visiting students' attention was also drawn towards the need of scientific solution of local problem and also the local Bio-Resources which could give rise to technology for better economy. The research scholars and faculty members elaborated their research works and inspired the students to pursue a career in scientific research.

Prof. Narayan Chandra Talukdar, Director IASST forwarded the inaugural speech in the Open Day Session and appealed the students to develop a scientific temperament with interest in basic science.

The students also made a visit to the Traditional Knowledge Hub and Bio Diversity Park of the Institution. It was a great deal of enthusiasm visible in the faces of visiting students. This type of program has been a very effective venture in generating genuine interest in science.

Report

5 June 2019 World Environment Day. On the occasion of this environment day Nature club Barbhag College organized a lecture Programme in Association with Barbhag Yuba Samaj, The lecture was chaired by Dr. Karuna Baruah, Head of Department of Mathematics. The resource person was Mr. Gautam Baishya, HOD, Chemistry. Before starting the main lecture the secretary of Nature Club explained the significance and objectives of World Environment Day to the students. He also gave a brief overview of air pollution and global warming.

Resource Person Mr. Gautam Baishya said that the United Nations has adopted "Air Pollution" as the main theme of Environment Day this year. Air pollution is the main cause of global warming. Pollution has caused small holes in the Ozone layer and these holes allow the sun's ultraviolet rays to fall on the Earth and damage life. Mr. Baishya added that if the Earth's temperature continues to rise, the life on Earth will be on the verge of extinction within the next few years. He urged the students to focus on tree planting to prevent global warming. He also urged the students to work together to prevent pollution. After Baishya's speech, the Chairperson thanked all the participants and announced the closure of the meeting.

GROUP DISCUSSION
ON
“STUDENTS NEED TO PARTICIPATE IN THE POLITICAL SYSTEM”

DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE

DATE: 05/12/2019

On 05.12.2019, the department of Political Science organised a group discussion among the students of the department in the major room. The topic for the group discussion was “Students need to participate in the Political system”. Dr. Dhaneswar Baishya, Associate Professor of the Department of Political Science was present as the moderator of the group discussion programme along with the other faculty members.

The group discussion was held among three groups comprising the students of the department. The first group choose to speak in favour of the topic of discussion. The group highlighted the fact that the students from ancient time kept themselves engaged in politics, especially during reform movements. This involvement is in basically informal politics, like social movements, pressure groups etc. The group also put forwarded the view that students are the future nation-makers, who have more zeal towards the betterment of the society. They tend to more enthusiastic, energetic and flexible. They argued that India is one of the youngest democracies having 65% of its population below the 35 years. But the percentage of the young MPs is just 13% in the parliament, which is a drawback to the representativeness of the democracy. Policies affecting youth can be framed by young people themselves rather than old politicians, who most probably cannot feel the contemporary problems young people are facing. By making politics accessible to youth, the negative perceptions of politics can be slowly erased in the minds of young people. Therefore, the involvement of students in politics ensures inclusiveness. Another point added by this group that older politicians have to prove their loyalty to their political parties by supporting their authoritarian practices because of the long term commitment to their parties. The students have advantage in this case, because for them, ideals and ideas dominate their commitment to the political parties.

The second group was against the topic of group discussion. They held that students tend to have idealistic and unrealistic visions for society, which may not be successful in implementation in the politics. They also lack experience because of which they become intolerant and unable to have realistic visions. For which, they can easily be manipulated and can be used as mere puppets in the hands of older politicians. This can be clearly seen in the violence and destruction of public properties by a few student groups. Another negative side highlighted by the group is that involvement of students in politics hampers their study also as students do not get sufficient time to devote in studies. This in long run affects their ability to get jobs or get them placed in profitable occupation. That is why; this group suggested that the students should stay away from politics for better prospects in life.

The third group presented their view about the participation of students in politics. They pointed out the hindrances on the way of students' participation in politics. They held that at present, Politics are not accessible to the common young people. Most of the young politicians of the present generation are from political families. Politics is not a career option in the present days and there is a strong negative feeling in the minds of people on politics that it is only for the corrupt. So, parents don't encourage their children to settle in it. In addition to this, there are economic constraints involved in the political participation of students as being active in politics doesn't ensure a regular pay check for them. Even if one chooses politics as a career, she/he has to wait for a really long time to get public support. Moreover, there is lack of political institutions. Students do not get incentives for political participation. Again, political participation may create threat to their life.

After listening to all the views put forwarded by the groups, the moderator and the other faculties of the department of Political Science came to the conclusion that:

- Political participation of students should be beyond the mere casting of vote. Young people must be involved in the process of elections as election observers, poll station workers etc.
- Students should be given the opportunity to do an internship in parliament.

- Political awareness should be given to the students of schools and universities and they should be encouraged to participate in politics.
- Student wings of the political parties need to be given more strength and priority.
- Skills trainings have to be provided to student politicians by experienced politicians.
- Political awareness campaigns must ensure that students are turning out in the elections to cast their vote.
- Student wings of the political parties have to be too transparent.
- Students led community development programs and volunteering organizations must be supported by the government.
- There is a need to form local level student councils.
- Student groups should be allowed to visit the national parliaments.
- Students' movements should be dealt in a respectable way and their voices need to be heard in the parliament.

Report on Outreach programme by Barbhag College in rural schools

(12/03/2019-27/11/2019)

Barbhag College implemented a programme for the rural secondary school students in collaboration with Aryabhatta Science centre, Nalbari during the year 2018-19 and 2019-20. The title of the programme was “Outreach programme by college in rural schools”. The programme was catalyzed and supported by Assam Science Technology and Environment Council (ASTEC) and Dept. of Science & Technology, Govt of Assam vide their sanction letter no ASTEC/ENV/1894/3489 dated 30/10/2018. The total programme cost was estimated as Rs 1, 45,000/- , out of which 1, 16,000/- was released by the sponsoring authority.

Objective of the Programme: The programme is intended to develop scientific temperament among the students of secondary schools and to create excitements in understanding science. As the infrastructure of most of the rural schools are not up to the mark, it is felt that intervention by the academic community at higher level may motivate the teachers and students in schools towards science and could make science more interesting .By involving college teachers in helping rural schools in deliberating science in a better and effective manner is the main target of this project.

Wetlands include natural ecology that is of great environmental importance and biodiversity conservation. The goal of each year is to make people aware of the need to be able to conserve this precious natural habitat. For this reason, World Wetlands Day is celebrated every 22nd February. A wetland is an ecosystem whose soil is permanently or periodically flooded. It can occur in both freshwater ecosystems and in certain areas with a certain degree of salinity.

Wetlands are nature's best gift. Wetlands continue to contribute to the country's GDP, economic growth, maintaining the balance of nature, meeting the need for meat, natural refineries, guest bird sanctuaries and, in particular, the successful expansion of the fisheries sector. He also narrated - how logical is our behavior and role in the proper progress of wetland management and fisheries? He asked himself - have we ever tried to think? To what extent can we play an honest and effective role in protecting wetlands, developing environmentally friendly fisheries, increasing the production of native species of fish, conserving fish and delivering healthy fish to the consumers? Dr.Deka said that the desired development by indiscriminately filling wetlands and questioning the balance of nature and environment through the application of various chemicals!

Dr. Deka said the students that we did not wake up when we were awake. The canals around us - beels, reservoirs, rivers - should be kept as clean as possible. In particular, aquatic life needs to be facilitated by removing plastic waste. If we can do that, then the significance of celebrating World Watershed Day will be meaningful.

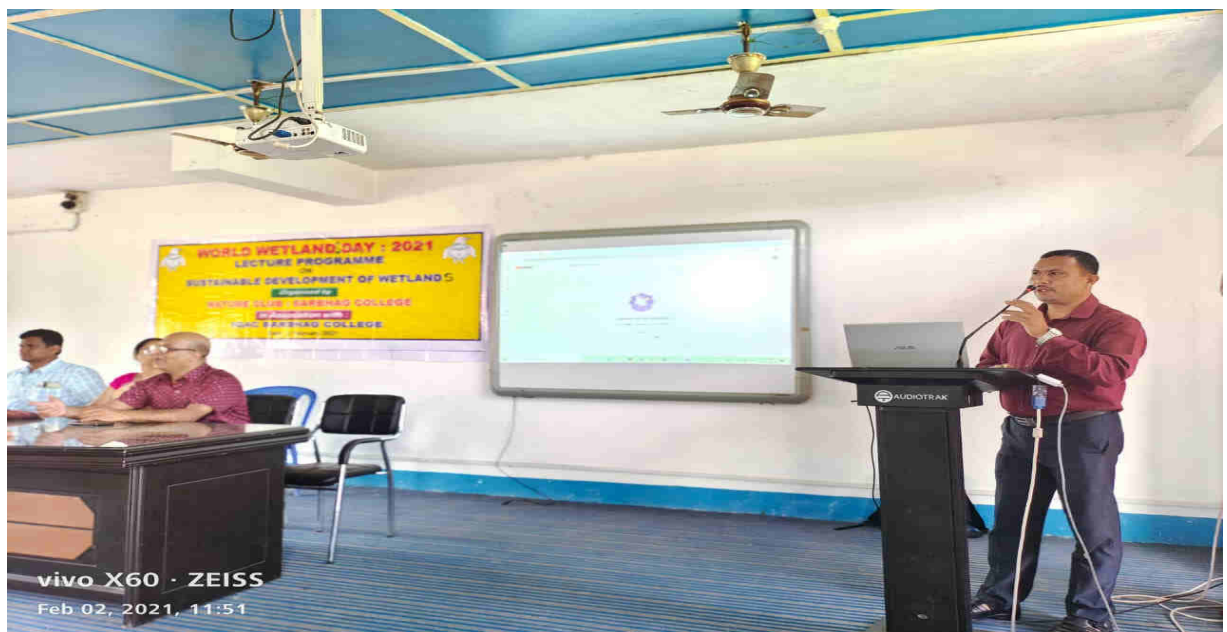

At last, the chair person Mrs. Nibedita Goswami thanked the Participant students & nature club to organise such a valuable awareness programme.
